Meat and vegetable vendors at Phsar Chas Market in Phnom Penh's Daun Penh district demand the use of street stalls. Hong Menea

Get your business the attention it deserves by using The Phnom Penh Post's significant digital audience to deliver your message most effectively.

About 30 vendors at the Phsar Chas Market in the capital's Daun Penh district demanded that its management allow products to be sold in stalls next to streets, claiming they were selling items of daily necessity as permitted by the Phnom Penh Municipal Administration.

Vendors that sold meat, fish and vegetables made the demand while protesting on May 31 in front of the market in the district's Phsar Chas commune.

Virak Chamman, a vendor who has two stalls that sells pork and beef, told The Post that shop owners wanted to return to their stalls as municipal hall announced that all state markets could reopen on May 24.

"Since the announcement, my stall has remained shut. According to the municipal hall's guidelines, we have the right to sell meat and vegetables," he said.

"At first I agreed to the market manager's request to be patient, but only 4 to 5
