Casino staffer Srey Mab said their February wages, which were supposed to be paid on the 10th of the month, remain to be settled.

“Since January, the payment of our wages had not been regular. This month, the company promised to pay our delayed wages but it’s already March 22, and we have yet to receive our salary,” said Ms Mab.

She said despite their fear of contracting the coronavirus, which has infected many in the Kingdom, the need for money forces them to report for work.

“We are afraid of the COVID-19 but we come to work as we need our wages to support the daily living of our families,” said Ms Mab.

Another worker who requested anonymity said the workers understand the financial blows the casino has incurred due to the outbreak.

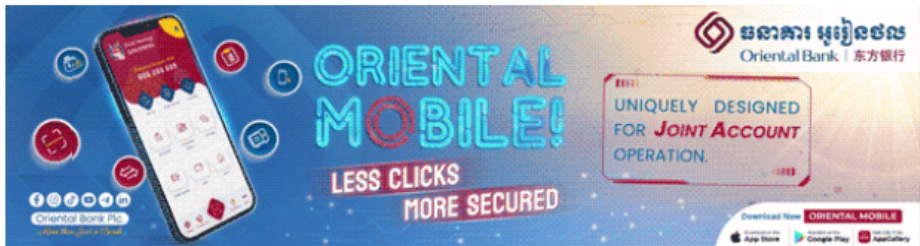

“With a decline in the number of guests the casino has been receiving, the company had to make some wage cuts. We understood that and still came to work. However, they failed to pay us regularly,” said the worker as she appealed for the intervention of the provincial labour department.

“If we remain quiet, no one will know about our problem. That is why we came out here to protest and ask for the labour department’s assistance in finding a solution for our problem,” she said.

Met Vanna, chief of Preah Sihanouk provincial labour department’s inspections and labour dispute office, said yesterday the department had already sent officials to mediate between the staffers and the company. The company has since agreed to pay the arrears by Wednesday.

Labour department director Yov Khemara previously told Khmer Times that 56 out of 75 casinos in Preah Sihanouk were closed down due to the online gambling ban imposed by Prime Minister Hun Sen in August last year.

About 7,700 casino employees were laid off as owners of the casinos, most of whom were Chinese nationals, left the Kingdom.

Khmer New Year 2024, blessed Cambodia

The consequences of the Covid-19 pandemic and the suspension of the flow of Chinese tourists and investors to Cambodia, provide grounds for telling a dark story of the Cambodian economy.

Will Israel-Iran conflict trigger another ‘Middle East war’?

Iran launched an unprecedented strike on Israeli territory, escalating long-standing tensions between the two countries. At a time when many are concerned, it could blow up into a full-scale regional conflict. Israel could give a proportional response.

War avoidance is the only path for Iran and Israel

Though it is too early to predict the trajectory of escalation in the Iran-Israel crisis, it is important to assess the events as they occurred and benchmark them against three strategic aspects: intent, credibility, and willingness to go to war in respect of both belligerents.

Who is Narendra Modi, the Indian strongman seeking a third term in...

If on June 4, the ruling Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) wins enough seats in India's 18th parliamentary election to form the next government, as is expected, and incumbent leader Narendra Damodardas Modi becomes prime minister for the third time, future historians of India may see the era from 1947 to 2014

‘Woody Woodpecker Goes to Camp’ leaves viewers confused

Ha ha ha ha ha!!! Yes, the good old Woody Woodpecker is back in a Netflix original film that is all about fusion: animation in live action, which opened with the iconic Universal Studio globe opening. The result is, well, a mediocre project that takes common sense for granted.
